

Utah State University
Department of Sociology, Social Work and Anthropology
Assistant Professor, Sociology

The Department of Sociology, Social Work & Anthropology at Utah State University invites applications for a nine-month tenure-track position in Sociology at the rank of Assistant Professor. The appointment begins in August 2020. We seek candidates who can contribute to our Demography and Community/Environment specialization areas through a research and teaching emphasis on either (1) community and/or environmental health (e.g., environmental health disparities) or (2) the dynamic interplay between population and the environment (e.g., the effects of climate change on migration). Scholars who have an interest in contributing to the department's programs, curricular offerings, and research portfolio in ways that enhance diversity, equity, and inclusion are encouraged to apply.

Review of applications will begin on October 7, 2019.

Responsibilities: The successful candidate will develop and teach a graduate course in either (1) environmental health or (2) population and environment. In addition, the candidate will contribute to other undergraduate and graduate coursework in Sociology and Demography that meshes with the faculty member's expertise and fits the department's needs.

Qualifications:

- Candidates must have a PhD in Sociology or a closely related discipline as of the employment date.
- Demonstrated accomplishment and/or clear potential for success in undergraduate and graduate teaching, research, and extramural funding.
- Candidates must also show evidence of training and experience conducive to the development of graduate coursework in Demography, with additional training/experience in environmental or community sociology preferred.
- Evidence of a program of research conducive to external funding is required, with documented grant-writing experience preferred.
- The balance among teaching, research, and service will be consistent with a faculty role in a Carnegie Doctoral Extensive research institution.

Salary: Commensurate with qualifications and experience, plus excellent benefits
